OUR WEEKLY GOSPI.

We are pleased to hear from all classes of men that business, during the present year, has been unusually good. The merchant seems satisfied with what he has sold—the mechanic speaks favorably of the number of buildings erected, and the manufacturer in every place, prospers with health and content. It is pleasant to record these things. The success of one class is the success of all. In as well as the merchant feels the benefit of the "good times," so does the laborer, and his wages increase as fast, of growing great and wealthy, if his citizens are only industrious and true to themselves. The danger is that when people begin to grow rich, they disregard the maxims to which they owe their success; they launch into extravagance; they become inordinately fond of society, and, in a day, make national bankruptcy results, and the country rotters for years on the brink of ruin.

In another column will be found the latest foreign news. There is little of interest brought out by this arrival, except a letter from the editor of the Advertiser of the fallacies of the Slave-trade. The Cambria, which is the bower of the news, unfortunately struck on Cape Cod. Whether she will be a total loss or not, we have as yet no certain intelligence. The Advertiser says that the Cambria may be got off the beach without loss and without delay.

John Quincy Adams, in his old age, maintains the dignity of his years, as well as following vices will show. There was a letter to him in the Advertiser of a young lad, and probably the first time the Saturday Emporium of last week.

TO MISS E. WELCH.

One day between the Lip and Heart
A sweet smile, a smile of art
His purpose to discern.

The Lip called forth her sweet Tongue,
And made him voice—she said,

The smile, the smile, the smile song,
And she had the smile.

The Heart, to speak, in voice song,
Nor could his purpose reach—

His will was won; nor song charmed;
His smile was his speech.

Mark these, therefore, child of Earth!

With a smile—

Not all the Lip song is worth.

The silence of the Heart!

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

CONDITION OF MEXICO.

The accounts from Mexico still speak of rumors of revolution in that distracted country. It would seem, indeed, as if, for some great national crime, that nation had been given over to anarchy and ruin, as in her degenerate past. Providence was preparing for her a vast and terrible punishment, to allay the sins of Cortez, and the sins of his successors, were being terribly avenged on the Spanish conquerors of the empire of the Moctezumas.

Let us not be among those who suppose that God has nothing to do with the fortunes of kingdoms. Never was a great national crime perpetrated with such reticence and secrecy.

He who suffers not a reprimand, nor calls for a review to fail, deserves, will surely overlook the wrongs and cruelties of millions of men. Why, then, is Mexico a scene among nations?

It seems, first, a mystery that this country should have no such great leaders, and that she has fallen so low.

At all that sought to make a nation rich and powerful, she has the advantage of the United States. Travellers speak with rapture of the magnificence of her lands, the atmosphere and the healthfulness of her climate, and the grand-spirited freedom. Retained by a company of scoundrels, and the power of her slaves, were being terribly avenged on the Spanish conquerors of the Moctezumas.
